

Heritage Protection for Fed Square

The Royal Historical Society of Victoria welcomes and supports the National Trust's nomination of Federation Square for listing on the State Heritage Register.

Melbourne has long dreamt of a civic square that would be a public space at the heart of the city, offering a meeting place open to all. Federation Square has quickly established itself as the fulfilment of that dream. In architectural terms, it embodies a remarkably coherent example of late 20th-Century architecture, creating a truly public civic square. It has, as the National Trust puts it, 'come to be highly valued by the community on both a cultural and architectural level'.

Both designs for the Apple store will destroy that coherence. To turn over a whole building to become a shop for a multi-national will alienate its public status. If its public status and architectural coherence can be threatened so soon after its construction, then it is important to act now to protect it.

The RHSV strongly urges Heritage Victoria to support this listing and will make a detailed submission to this effect. Listing would ensure that any proposals for significant change to the square would be subject to a proper public permit process, unlike the proposals for the Apple Store to date.
