A Celebration

Please join us to celebrate the 85th birthday of Hugh Anderson

Tuesday 14 February  11.30 am - 1.00pm

Hugh is a former Council member and Vice President of the RHSV and has been a Fellow of the RHSV since 1974. He is recognised as the outstanding scholar of Australian folklore including poetry and colonial ballads, and has produced an extraordinary body of published works since 1953. His books range from school text books, bibliographies, collections and editions of songs and ballads to local histories (Victoria, from Discovery to Federation (1974), Ringwood, Place of many eagles (1974) and biographies of John Pascoe Fawkner (Out of the Shadow) and Squizzy Taylor (Larrikin Crook, later reissued as The Rise and Fall of Squizzy Taylor). He has contributed a dozen articles to the Australian Dictionary of Biography. He created the imprint Red Rooster Press which was responsible for publishing important specialist texts by him and by others which might not otherwise have seen the light of day. All this and more was achieved amongst the demands of a full-time career as a school teacher and principal.

In December 2008 the University of Melbourne awarded Hugh Anderson the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters.

To summarise his work is to do him an injustice: this Lunchtime Event will allow us to say a little more: to give a better appraisal of his enormous contribution to the cause of history in Australia, and to celebrate with song and ballad.

It will also be an opportunity for Hugh to launch his latest work from his own Red Rooster Press – and to hear extracts from the book's companion CD:

Two axe Mac : the story of Simon McDonald / recorded, edited and introduced by Hugh Anderson ; transcriptions by Dawn Anderson

Join us at the RHSV Library, Ground Floor, 239 A’Beckett Street, Melbourne at 11.30am on Tuesday 14 February when we will also be treated to a selection of songs by folk legends Danny Spooner and Dave and Lynne Lumsden, and tributes from historians including Professor Kate Darien Smith.

Space in the Library is limited so bookings are essential, and we urge you to book early for this unique event. A light sandwich lunch and refreshments will follow, and the event will conclude around 1pm.

Bookings can be made by calling 9326 9288 or via our website www.historyvictoria.org.au

OBITUARY

Barbara Nixon, OAM FRHSV

We were profoundly shocked and deeply saddened to receive news of the sudden passing of our dear friend and Society librarian Barbara Nixon a week before Christmas.

It was an enormous privilege for library volunteers, past and present, to have shared the challenges, achievements, frustrations and friendship during Barb's wonderful service of more than forty years commitment to the RHSV collections.

A qualified librarian Barb joined the volunteer roster during the final years of Mrs Hill's tenure as part-time librarian. In the hotch-potch which comprised the collection area at 19 Queen Street she undertook book processing and sorting duties under far from ideal physical conditions.

Following the appointment of Martin Merchant as our first full time librarian Barb joined him in the total reorganization of the library collection, assisting in the arduous task of re-cataloguing under the Dewey system, listing and accessioning all non-book published material held and, most importantly, setting in process the sorting, listing and indexing of the manuscript collection leading to the publication in 1985 of Sources of Victoria's Heritage, the catalogue of manuscripts held by the Society. Such was the measure of her work that her nomination for Fellowship in 1982 was carried with much acclamation. It was during this period that Barb served a five year term on the Council.

Following the retirement of Martin, Barb was appointed our second full time librarian. Always a practical down-to-earth organizer she inspired her volunteer group to cope through four relocations of the collection, the packing and unpacking testing the organizer she inspired her volunteer group to cope through four relocations of the collection, the packing and unpacking testing the physical conditions.

While the library represented Barb’s focus we must not overlook her contribution to the Society itself. Birthday cakes appeared on due date, get well and good cheer cards were sent, phone calls and visits made and who will forget the carb soda clean of the coffee mugs – the list goes on.

We will miss Barb’s presence among us. No more the cry “sorry, don’t know, ask Barb”.

To her family and friends we extend our thoughts and sympathy.

Dr Barnes joins RHSV Council

RHSV welcomes Dr Robert Barnes onto Council

Dr Robert Barnes has a BA, MA, MLitt and PhD, mostly in Australian history. His PhD thesis, under the supervision of Assoc. Prof. Don Garden at Melbourne University, was on Captain John Hunter, second Governor of NSW, which was subsequently published by Sydney University Press under the title “An Unlikely Leader”.

This will be Robert’s third spell on the RHSV council; the first from 1984 to 1989, the second between 1999 and 2003; he was Vice President 2002 to 2003.

He chaired the Committee which arranged the 2003 commemorations marking the bicentenary of the first European settlement in Victoria at Sorrento and has been President of the Nepean Historical Society since 2006.

During the 20 year period 1983-2003, he was CEO of the Australian Institute of Bankers, the Municipal Association of Victoria and the Royal Australian Chemical Institute. He is currently a Partner in a firm which locates Directors for Boards, is on the Committee of the Athenaeum Club and is a member of the Rotary Club of Melbourne.

Robert has been a member of the RHSV for over 30 years and has been a contributor and book reviewer for the RHSV journal during his earlier times on Council.

VHJ INDEX – ADDITIONS to our WEBSITE

Our journal is again made more useful to members, specialist researchers and the general reader with a massive update to its index on our website.

Volume 81 of the Victorian Historical Journal at 311 pages is near to our largest to date; rivalled only by Vols 33, 41, 46 and 79. Consequently its comprehensive index, running to over 1250 individual entries, is close to the largest number of entries for one volume: Vol 79, 2008, beats it at 1548 entries.

But this is mere number crunching – the index points to a wealth of information about Victoria’s history, culture, social character and development. Articles in Volume 81 focussed on: Walter Woodbury’s 1855 photographic panorama of Melbourne; the RHSV’s Robert Law Glass Slide Collection; Victoria and the Armenian Relief Movement; the Melbourne Athenaeum and its Secretary (1909-1949); perceived differences between Victoria and other Australian States; artist Jane Cannan; Aboriginal language areas in Northeast Victoria; Lord Hewart of Bury’s The New Despotism (1929); the life and times of Peter Snodgrass (1817-1867); the massacre of the Gadubanud at Aire River; the University of Melbourne’s first female students; Bonegilla Reception and Training Centre (1947-1971); the Old Supreme Court of Victoria; and the ‘phenomenal coolness of Tunnerminnerwait’. Additionally ten extended book reviews were published.

Our thanks go to John Adams for compiling the index, Richard Barnden for putting it into a form suitable for computer searching and Laura Frost for posting it on our new website. Annually John presents a seminar on Indexing for Historical Societies. His book on the subject is available from the Society: 9326 9288 or office@historyvictoria.org.au.
NEW EXHIBITION

The Spirit of the Time

15 March – 20 April

What motivated the pioneers of local history to collect? Why did the founders see local history as important? These questions guided the selection of images for the RHSV address book.

Based on the collections of the RHSV this exhibition traces early collecting patterns of the RHSV and asks the question – how do we maintain the passion – how do we capture “The Spirit of the Time?” (William John Hughston – Founder RHSV – The Argus 1909)

YOU ARE INVITED TO A SPECIAL VIEWING

Members are invited to a Special Viewing of this exhibition on:

TUESDAY 20 MARCH

to be followed by Hilary McPhee speaking on her recent publication Memoirs of a Young Bastard: The Diaries of Tim Burstall.

Awards of Merit

Please consider nominating a member of your society for an Award of Merit or Fellowship.

In this edition we publish the citation for Wemyss Struss who received an Award of Merit at the RHSV 2011 AGM.

Leading, sharing, inspiring

Wemyss Struss joined Stratford and District Historical Society in 1988 soon after moving to the area from suburban Melbourne. The Society, which started in 1968, had begun to mark time somewhat; meeting bi-monthly and lacking progress. In 1989 Wemyss accepted the position of Vice President and then in 1990 she was elected President and under her dynamic leadership a contagious enthusiasm evolved.

Wemyss has also been an active member of many other groups in the area and this wide range of connections and contacts has increased the Society’s ability to both seek and share information and resources when needed.

The Society moved the Museum and collection into the former 1873 Methodist Church in 1981 and, while not owning the building, grants for repairs and improvements were rarely available. Under Wemyss’ leadership, encouragement and generosity, unbelievable progress has been made with the achievement of the Society’s long term goal - the ownership of the building as well as the addition of an adjoining storage shed. Since becoming the owners in 2004 Stratford and District Historical Society have successfully obtained several grants to help with restoration of the building and collection management. Wemyss has continued to motivate, organise and/or help co ordinate members of the Society with all the ongoing fundraising and hundreds of hours of working bees and volunteer labour which have now resulted in the Society having a Museum which is the envy of many other societies.

She has always had a strong personal interest in people and history. She has read widely and been keen to both learn, share and encourage family and friends and members of the wider community in following up their particular questions, interests and talents, which, in turn, has led to the Society expanding the knowledge and resources we have available at the Museum.

A large measure of the Society’s success can be attributed to her leadership and personal hours of hard work and active connection with many parts of our rural area. She can be described as the lynch pin that keeps everything together at Stratford and District Historical Society.

SUPPORT THE PASSION

Why not start the New Year with a fresh Address Book?

The RHSV Address Book is a wonderful souvenir of the RHSV collection. Images include rare photographs of Jessie Webb, the Paper Boy taken on the corner of Collins and Swanston Streets, c.1860, soldiers landing on Anzac Beach, April 25, 1915; a Jane Cannon drawing of Gardiner’s Creek (Toorak Road) Prahran, 1853, as well as art works and manuscripts. There are 34 beautifully reproduced images giving a comprehensive overview of the collection. The forward to the address book gives a brief history of the Royal Historical Society of Victoria but most of all it encourages you buy this book and give to a friend to inspire within them a passion for Victorian history.

Address Books can be purchased by phoning the RHSV on 9326 9288 or via our website www.historyvictoria.org.au.

We note below relevant items sent to the Society. Interested groups or authors are invited to contribute to this valuable service to members in History News and through possible deposit in the library. Some items may later be reviewed in our journal.

Memories of a hard-working life much of it spent on the Mornington peninsula told for his family but published for deservedly wider circulation. A well-told chronicle.

Jim Lowden (compiler), Kilmore Remembers: Road and Street Names, A Selection, Lowden Publishing, 29 Lisbeth Ave., Donvale, 3111, 2011, pp. vi + 86, $15-95 + 2-50 postage

The compiler's contribution to Kilmore history and heritage is very significant. This latest booklet carries out his aim of putting something out there hoping that 'it will be the basis for correction and feedback'. He plans many more in the 'Kilmore Remembers' series, all of them the result of collaborative research but made possible by Jim Lowden's energetic publishing. A very worthy tackling of the puzzles of the origins of street names.

The impact of Indigenous Australians on the environment through 'firestick farming' has been widely acknowledged since the 1960s but the extent of that impact has usually been limited to particular areas and assigned as being a minor cause of the state of the environment that existed in 1788. In this challenging book, Gammage argues that Indigenous Australians managed landscapes around Australia in a complex system using fire and knowledge of life cycles of native plants that resulted in a plentiful supply of food throughout the year. He supports his arguments by analysis of European descriptions in images and observations showing that the identification of 'park-like' countryside was what it looked like, not what the observers thought it should look like. He links the Indigenous management practices to their attitudes to land and the importance of totems. He uses the work of botanists and other scientists but disputes their general lack of acceptance of the importance of Indigenous practices. This is a book that must be read by anyone with an interest in understanding how Australia was made.

There have been a number of excellent school histories published in recent years that enlarge our understandings of the student experience over time, that closely relate the school to the values of the wider community, and that take account of changing concepts of education, as well as the impact of particular teachers and administrators, financial management and building programs. Schools choose to present a chosen kind of history. In this case, the choice was for a beautifully-presented, well-written, glossy account of 150 years, largely framed around the succession of principals. It lacks the depth of the recent histories of Scotch College, Wesley College and University High School, partly because of the limited scope of its questionnaires and interviews, and like so many histories of independent schools, it deals with cuts in government funding but does not acknowledge the enormous benefits that have resulted from that funding since the 1960s.

The first substantial biography of Henrietta Dugdale, a notable early Australian feminist who migrated to Victoria in the early 1850s. Married three times, she took the name of her second husband, William, and lived a life well described as ‘activist’ in times when not many women campaigned for rights to suffrage and education. A talented individual, her activism gained widespread respect in spite of her unconventional life. This was not an easy biography to write because there were virtually no private papers. Susan Priestley's masterly recreation of Henrietta’s life, her family, social circles and times from the public record is a considerable research feat, well documented and clearly expressed.

This widely acclaimed biography adds considerably to our understandings of Clark's life and works. It is both massive and very readable; it draws on the enormous deposits of Clark writings: letters, notes, diaries, autobiographies, speeches, articles, short stories, as well as the published histories and interviews with those who knew him and worked with him. It draws not only on Manning’s ‘deposits’ but also Dymphna’s. In what seemed to be a well-worked field, there is so much that is fresh. As McKenna acknowledges, he had access to ‘private and sensitive material’ to which most families would have restricted access, something that he attributes to a ‘commitment to truth telling’, partly derived from Dymphna Clark. It is difficult to imagine that there will be a Clark biography to surpass this one, but the interest in the man and his work still invokes passion.

Military history and arguments for a distinctive Australian identity remain thriving areas in book publication. This is a revised version of the text first published in 2003 with new chapters on the Digger in Iraq and updates on the location and identification of the soldiers buried en masse after Fromelles. Lindsay argues for a distinctive Digger identity against contentions otherwise.

Norman Houghton, A Grand Parade, 150 Years of the Colac & District Pastoral & Agricultural Society, the author, PO Box 1128, Geelong, 3220, pp. vi + 102

The annual show has been an important event in most of regional Victoria for a long time – more than a 150 years in this case. The showgrounds also provided the venue for other community activities – a range of sports, outdoor and indoor; social functions and conferences; and during World War 2 it was requisitioned for military training with consequent damage. The work of voluntary committees in sustaining the show and its grounds is strongly presented.

Another graphic book documenting settlement and railway and tramway development in the difficult terrain of the Otways served by the 24 km narrow gauge railway built from Beech Forest to Crowes that opened in 1911. Amply illustrated, the book adds materially to our appreciation of Otways history, to which the author is the prime contributor.
History as Theatre

_The Girls in Grey_ is a vivid, moving and candid account of ordinary women in extraordinary circumstances.

The play tells the stories of three Australian Army nurses during World War 1. From the time of leaving our Australian shores they traverse the splendours of sunset over the Sphinx in Egypt, to the eruption of casualties from the Dardanelles. The barren shores of Lemnos Island test even the most stoic, and in the muddy sludge of the Western Front they overcome horrific working conditions, bearing witness to the horror of war and the devastation of young men involved in front line conflict. Elsie always looks for the brighter side. Her infectious sense of humour disguises a fierce determination to follow her husband Syd to war. Courageous Alice is drawn to adventure, unexpectedly falling in love with Harry; a lieutenant whose fate is to be at the dreadful battle of Fromelles. Sturdy, serious Grace is the demanding yet compassionate Matron whose calm resolve is gradually eroded by the anguish of war.

The show will be performed at Theatre Works 22 Acland St, St Kilda from 25th April to 13 May 2012. Further information is available at info@theshifttheatre.com.au or by calling Helen on 0407 876 813.

History Film

Despite a caning from the critics for being ‘too sentimental’ and ‘historically inaccurate’, Spielberg’s film _War Horse_ makes a credible attempt to recreate a now-remote period in history, and is able to transport us to that world with attention to detail, though perhaps some of the ‘big picture’ accuracy is wanting. The screenplay was based on _War Horse_ a children’s novel by Michael Morpurgo, published in 1982, and a stage adaptation of the book in 2007 by Nick Stafford.

The real stars of the show of course were the horses, as befits a children’s story. The unhappy part of the recreation of the war scenes is that they seemed to me to be too realistic and frightening for children, these things being tempered in the novel by the child’s capacity to imagine them. Various personal reviews mention children seeing the film and enjoying it, but I would recommend observing the M rating.

Military History Conference for Melbourne -

In the Shadow of War – Australia 1942

For the first time in many years, an international military history conference will be held in Melbourne in 2012, the 70th anniversary year of 1942. _In the Shadow of War – Australia 1942_, over 21-22 April, will also open Victoria’s first ever Military History and Heritage Week.

The Conference will be opened by Lieutenant General Mark Evans AO, DSC (Rtd), former Chief of Joint Operations between 2008 and 2010. Professor David Horner, Professor of Australian Defence History in the Strategic and Defence Studies Centre at the Australian National University, will be the keynote speaker. The theme of Professor Horner’s keynote presentation is _1942: A pivotal year in Australian history._

Military History and Heritage Victoria Inc., the conference organiser, has brought together presentations by some of Australia’s top military, political and social historians, led by Professor Horner, along with historians from the USA and Japan. MHHV Patron, Major-General Jim Barry, AM, MBE, RDF, ED (Rtd), said that the conference was a comprehensive look at the controversies and issues of 1942, when for the first time modern Australia faced the prospect of foreign invasion. He said, “This is an opportunity not to be missed by anyone interested in the air, sea and land battles, the home front and the politics, the strategy from both sides, and the role of the Americans.”

Professor Horner said, “1942 saw many contentious issues in Australian history, for example what was the capacity of the Curtin Labor Government, to what extent did Australia give up sovereignty when it handed its forces to General Macarthur and did Japan really intend to invade Australia?

Beyond the events and these sorts of issues of 1942, however, it is important to place them in the broader context of Australian history. To understand what happened in 1942 and why, it is necessary to go back perhaps forty years in Australian history to understand for example, why it was that Australia was exposed and why were its defences so weak?”

Gala Dinner on 21 April will be a highlight of both the Conference and the Military History and Heritage Week, with Captain John Sheehan, USN, and US Air & Naval Attaché, as guest speaker.

MHHV president, Colonel Marcus Fielding (Rtd), said that MHHV Inc. was pleased to deliver a first class military history conference as its contribution to Military History and Heritage Week over 21-27 April 2012.

Details of the conference and dinner can be found on www.mhhv.org.au or call 0408 342 795 for more information.

SPECIAL OFFER TO RHSV MEMBERS

As a special offer for RHSV members, MHHV has extended its concession rate to any member of the RHSV who registers for the conference by 31st March 2012. To take advantage of this offer of $160 for the two day conference (a discount of $60 from the full price) please note clearly on the registration form that you are a RHSV member.

FURTHER READING

For further reading Simon Schama has an entertaining and insightful article on the role of movies on historical topics: and has some sport at the expense of Steven Spielberg’s _Armistead_ while conceding his brilliance as a storyteller. He asks whether historians should gripe too much at anomalies. He discusses a number of historical films.

Version Control for Excel and Word

Many societies now use Excel to keep records such as a Members Register or financial spreadsheets, however, once you make changes to your file you can often lose information. Tracking the changes made to a spreadsheet or keeping versions of files can be confusing and messy. An ideal situation would be to maintain one spreadsheet called Members Register.xlsx, but still be able to retrieve an electronic version of that spreadsheet for a given date, say the end of the previous financial month/year.

There is a simple program called MagnetSVN that allows you to do this. It is inexpensive at $19.00 and it integrates beautifully with Word 2007/2010 and Excel 2007/2010. After you make changes to a spreadsheet (or document) you click a button and ‘commit’ that spreadsheet to a repository, essentially taking a snapshot of it at that point in time, say 30 June 2011. You then continue using your spreadsheet as you would normally, and if you make any further changes, you can commit the spreadsheet again to the repository. Later down the track you can then retrieve the spreadsheet exactly as it was each time you committed it to the repository.

Those interested can download a trial version of MagnetSVN from the MagnetSVN website http://www.magnetsvn.com. You can also contact Laura Frost, the RHSV’s Local History Officer for more information or assistance.
